

MYSTERIES • HIGH STRANGENESS • THE UNEXPLAINED

Special Issue

NEW DAWN

VOL.17 NO.3

UNEXPLAINED MYSTERIES

ARTIFICIAL EARTHQUAKES
& WEATHER
MODIFICATION
The New Terrorism?

THE STONE OF DESTINY
*The Mysterious
Coronation Stone*

THE TESLA QUAKE

WHAT REALLY HAPPENS WHEN WE SLEEP?

Humans Co-existing with Dinosaurs?
THE MYSTERIOUS FIGURINES OF ACÁMBARO

VISIONS OF ATLANTIS
*The Story of Phyllos
A Dweller on Two Planets*

SPIRIT SPEAKER
Keeping in Touch with the Other Side

HIGH STRANGENESS IN THE HIGH DESERT
Art Bell & the Area 51 Caller

WILL CHARLES III BE THE LAST KING OF

ARTIFICIAL EARTHQUAKES & WEATHER MODIFICATION

The New Terrorism?

— BY MARIE D. JONES —

When it comes to acts of terrorism, there is a whole new game played on a whole new field, one that has the potential to affect millions, even billions, of people without being easily traced back to its perpetrators.

Bombing neighbourhoods and flying planes into buildings can only go so far in crippling the masses with fear enough to have them willingly submit to the dictates of those behind the terrorism – usually by giving up basic freedoms and begging for help and protection. Things have levelled up, and those behind such attacks may be operating on a much bigger, more devastating world stage.

That stage includes weather warfare and tectonic weapons with the capacity to cause extreme destruction and loss of life. We are talking about cutting-edge technology that flies under the radar of climate change and defense research. The creation of secret weapons that, except for unbridled nuclear war, promise a much bigger bang for the buck.

Conspiracy theories abound in this domain, but as conspiracy theories often do, they contain seeds of a growing and terrifying truth. Is nature being weaponised and turned against humanity?

We are talking about cutting-edge technology that flies under the radar of climate change and defense research.

WAS TURKIYE QUAKE NATURAL OR MANMADE?

On 6 February 2023, a magnitude 7.8 earthquake struck southern and central Turkiye as well as northern and western Syria. The Turkiye-Syria quake was followed by over 10,000 aftershocks, including a massive 7.7 quake centred just 95 km from the first one. The damage was widespread throughout the region, and fatalities quickly climbed into the tens of thousands. It was the largest quake in Turkiye since the 1939 Erzincan quake, also a 7.8, as well as the deadliest in modern history, with over 60,000 dead and over 14 million affected. It is now considered the deadliest natural disaster of any kind in Turkiye's history (as well as in present-day Syria). Globally, it is the deadliest natural disaster since the 2010 Haiti earthquake, a magnitude 7.0 that struck on 12 January 2010, killing 250,000 and displacing millions more.

The Turkiye-Syria and Haiti megaquakes struck highly vulnerable populations in areas where the people were used to destructive natural disasters of some kind. Both resulted in a global humanitarian crisis and response as countries sent aid in the form of money, food, and manpower. Both are highly active tectonic regions that often experience mid-to-large earthquakes.

They also share another link: the possibility that these quakes resulted from human engineering, not Mother Nature.

AS ABOVE, SO BELOW: THE HAARP CONNECTION

Back in 2010, LiveScience.com reported on the extraordinary

▲ On 6 February 2023, a magnitude 7.8 earthquake and massive aftershocks struck southern and central Türkiye as well as northern and western Syria, killing approximately 60,000 people and displacing millions more.

claim made by the then-President of Venezuela, Hugo Chavez. He had been quoted in a Spanish newspaper as saying the United States was “playing God” by testing devices capable of creating eco-type catastrophes. Chavez was also quoted as claiming Haiti’s killer 2010 quake had followed a test of some sort of “weapon of earthquakes.”¹ Soon after, Venezuelan media elaborated further, stating that the quake “may be associated with the project called HAARP, a system that can generate violent and unexpected changes in the climate.”

Long the fodder of conspiracy buffs, the High Frequency Active Auroral Research Program (HAARP) located near Gakona, Alaska, was said to be tampering with the Earth’s ionosphere, all under the guise of such innocuous projects as improving satellite communications, especially to submarines, and using the Ionospheric Research Instrument, or IRI, to transmit controlled, high-frequency radio waves to excite limited areas of the ionosphere to increase our knowledge of space physics. With funding from the United States Navy, Air Force, University of Alaska-Fairbanks, and the Defense Advanced Research Projects Agency (DARPA), HAARP was a prime target for those who believed there was far more to it than met the public eye.

Many recall the ominous words of former US Secretary of Defense William Cohen, who spoke in 1997 at the University of Georgia: “Precautions against unconventional arms must be intensified as potential terrorists develop chemical and biological weapons and electromagnetic methods that could create holes in the ozone layer or trigger earthquakes or volcanoes” (emphasis added).² Keep in mind that this was 1997, and technology has advanced far beyond what anyone of that era imagined.

If the government of the most powerful country in the world was concerned about weaponry that could trigger earthquakes and volcanoes, it might be safely assumed that said research was already well underway, if not being tested!

Chavez wasn’t alone in his distrust and accusations of engineered tectonic activity. This previously unthinkable weapon was considered by the author of a 2020 article in The Eurasian Times, “Were Haiti, Lebanon, & Now Turkey Subjected To a Man-Made Earthquake via HAARP Technology.”³

The article suggested that a major quake that hit Türkiye and Greece on 30 October 2020 was possibly an “induced earthquake” intended to make Türkiye “succumb to its knees,” owing to Türkiye’s threats to not allow Israel’s ‘annexation plan’ for the West Bank. The article also questioned whether the manmade quake was “to avenge Turkish President Tayyip Erdogan’s claim of Jerusalem once being a part of the Ottoman Empire,” or whether it was “a condemnation of Erdogan’s decision of reclaiming Hagia Sophia and his announcement about the Al Aqsa Mosque” among other possible theories, made more potent by the fact that Greece felt the same quake, but had zero mortalities. At least 90 people died in Türkiye.

As we will see later in this article in regard to the recent 2023 Turkiye quake, a tectonic weapon used at the right geopolitical moment in time could be effective in changing the course of history.

Another example is false flag attacks designed to achieve a positive outcome for the organisers of the attack. We only see the surface play, where one leader or country plots or attacks another or suddenly changes course, but the actual force orchestrating these events is well hidden. That force would likely offer a target the proof that they triggered or can cause an earthquake, but the general public would never believe such a fantastic “conspiracy theory.”

As for official reports of artificially induced quakes, we have a December 2019 admission published in The Diplomat that revealed the 2017 earthquake which struck Pohang City in South Korea was “not an Act of God, but manmade and induced.” After extensive investigations into faultlines, it was later determined that the most likely cause was from the injection of water into the ground by the geothermal plant in Pohang.

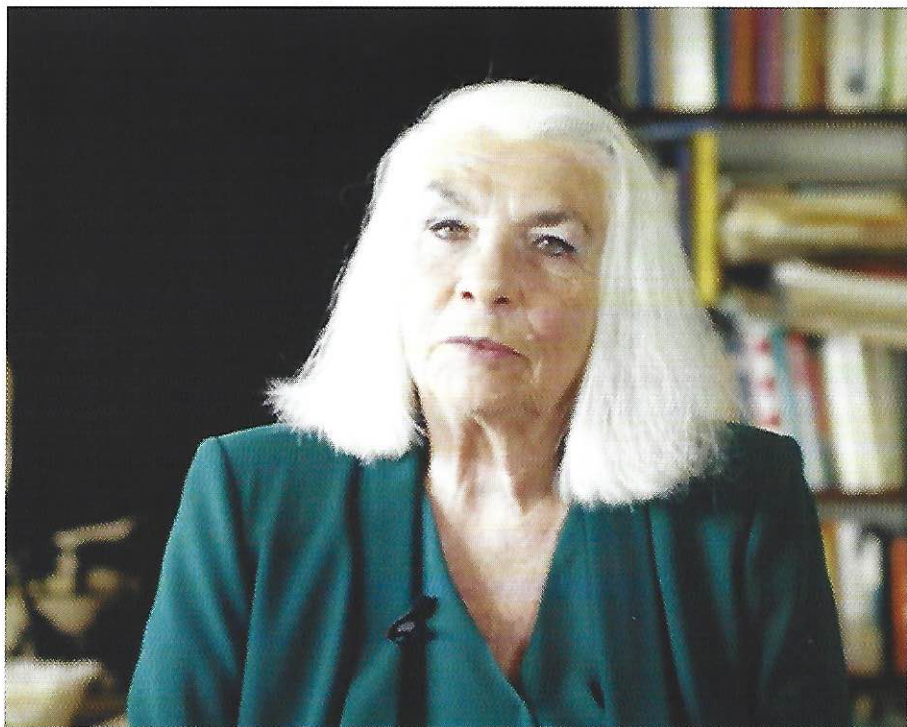

THE TURKIYE-SYRIA QUAKE & WERLHOF/BERTELL

The recent 2023 Turkiye-Syria quake is portrayed in the mainstream global media as a tragic natural disaster, but others question that assumption.

Sociologist and political scientist Professor Claudia von Werlhof was interviewed by the German magazine Zeitpunkt about the recent quake and the work of Rosalie Bertell (1929-2012), the American “environmental nun,” scientist, and author of the book Planet Earth: The Latest Weapon of War.⁴

Bertell is today also remembered as a peace activist and world-renown authority on the effects of low-level radiation. Her internationally recognised efforts to expose the often hidden victims of nuclear power and other environmental poisoning opened up avenues for her to learn about the dark side of secret weapons.

Bertell’s book, among other top-

▲ Claudia von Werlhof (1943-) is a German sociologist and political scientist. She held the first professorship for women’s studies in Austria, at the Institute for Political Science, University of Innsbruck.

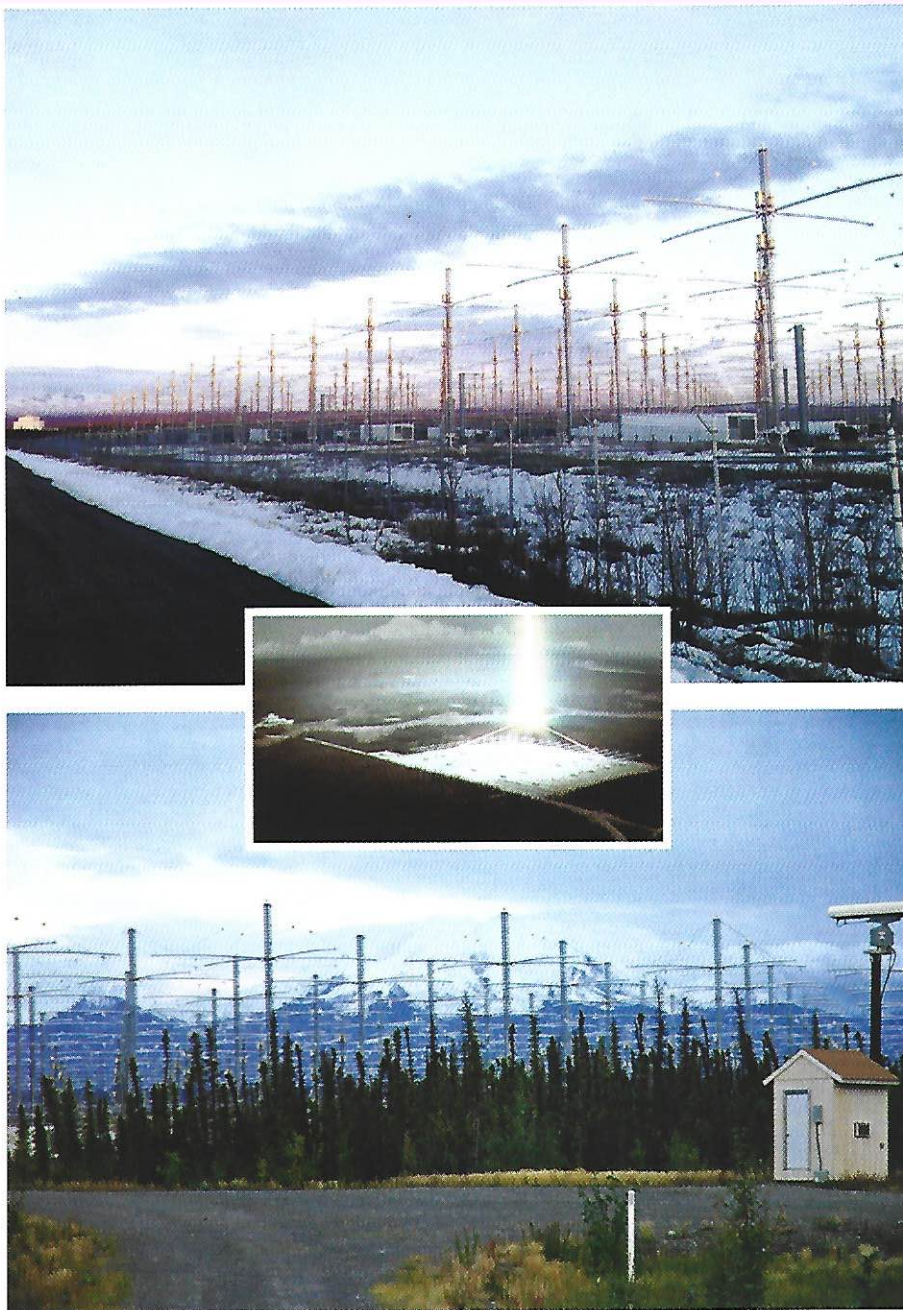

▲ The American scientist, author, environmental activist, epidemiologist, and Catholic nun, Rosalie Bertell (1929-2012).

ics, exposes the US military’s use of technologies that can control the weather and trigger volcanic eruptions and earthquakes.

Claudia von Werlhof began her own investigation into these possibilities after the 2010 Haiti quake and her own personal link to Bertell. She met Bertell in Bonn at the 30th anniversary of the Right Livelihood Award, the Alternative Nobel Prize, which Bertell had received in 1986 for her first book. From that point on, the two bonded over their work to explore, as Werlhof stated, “the overall picture of why weapons are being developed that affect the entire planet. Why does somebody want to get the planet under control and turn it into a weapon?”

Their work eventually led to an understanding that secret technologies could trigger earthquakes. “Rosalie always said that in individual cases it is difficult to separate the military geo-experiments from the real shaking of the planet. But knowledge of such possibilities has been available since 1976 at the latest, through the ENMOD Convention, the UN's Environmental Modification Convention. All these techniques have already been listed in it – up to earthquakes, volcanic eruptions, weather changes of all kinds.”

▲ In 2015, the US military handed over control of the HAARP facility to the University of Alaska Fairbanks. The inset graphic purports to illustrate the facility's super powerful beaming ability.

Werlhof claims some of these techniques were used during the Vietnam War. The technology behind it all is linked to the work of genius inventor Nikola Tesla. Upon his death in 1943, Tesla's “material was immediately absorbed – from East and West – and then used for new inventions. There are numerous official patents that you can read about,” she said.

In the interview, Werlhof remarks that this technology has been developed and used for over 80 years. She and Bertell agreed that “military technology is always several decades ahead of what the public knows and that environmental weapons will be part of the new wars.”

Werlhof mentions the theory that these weapons derive from experiments conducted by Tesla after he produced earthquakes near his own home using electromagnetic vibrations (see the article on page 10). “These vibrations are everywhere,” explains Werlhof. “He amplified them until the energy released created an earthquake that nearly destroyed his own home. Tesla made our modern world possible in the first place. Modern electronics could not have been possible without his scientific breakthroughs.”

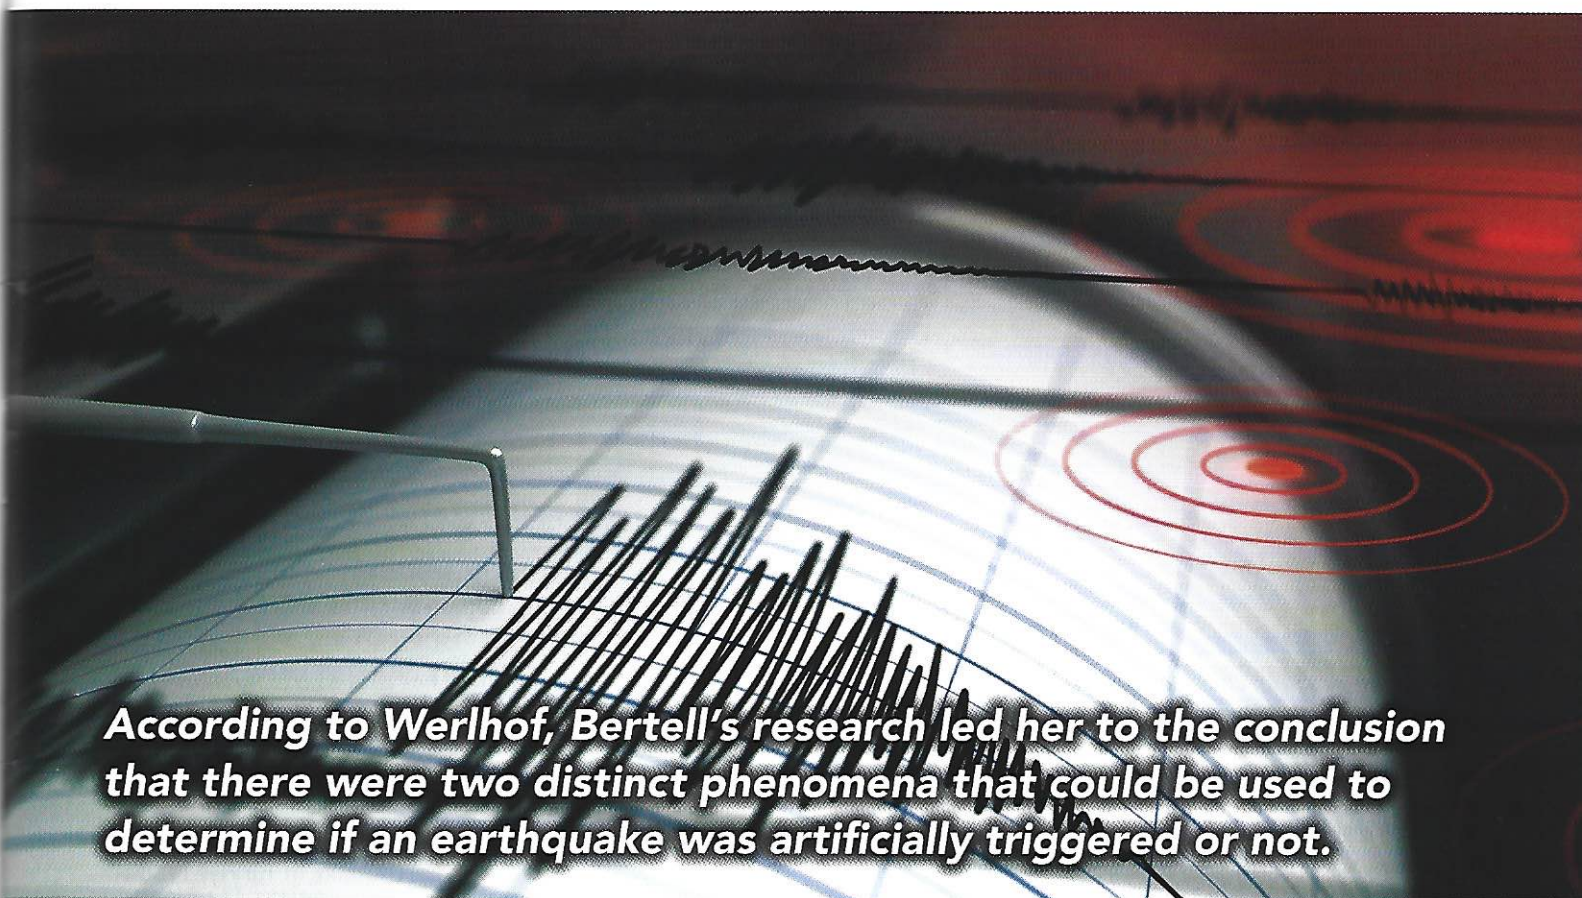

Bertell, like Chavez, believed HAARP was a key technology. Despite denials of HAARP involvement from mainstream media and scientists, Bertell said that HAARP acted like a gun barrel shooting down at the Earth.

Dr Nicholas Begich, the first scientist involved in the public campaign to expose the facility, described HAARP as “a super-powerful radiowave-beaming technology that lifts areas of the ionosphere (upper layer of the atmosphere) by focusing a beam and heating those areas. Electromagnetic waves then bounce back to earth and penetrate everything – living and dead.”

HAARP was officially “closed” by the US Air Force and handed back to the University of Alaska Fairbanks in August 2015. Werlhof believes “they supposedly shut it down because you could see what was happening there on the internet. For example, before the Haiti earthquake, you could see that the facility was in increased use. This verifiability of the system was a disadvantage for them. But there are dozens of similar plants worldwide.”

According to Werlhof, Bertell's research led her to the conclusion that there were two distinct phenomena that could be used to determine if an earthquake was artificially triggered or not.

“One is certain cloud formations that show certain waves with high energy travelling in the atmosphere. The other feature is flashes of light in the sky, similar to brief rainbows called plasma strikes, which occur when energies from the ionosphere heat up the atmosphere. And that has been observed in several earthquakes, for example, in China.”

According to Werlhof, Bertell's research led her to the conclusion that there were two distinct phenomena that could be used to determine if an earthquake was artificially triggered or not.

Turkish officials and civilians alike reported such light effects in the sky before the recent earthquake. Strangely, many citizens uploaded videos to social media and YouTube of the lights only to have their accounts suspended or the videos removed.

CREATING CLIMATE CHANGE

As pressure mounts from global governments and the World Economic Forum for drastic measures to curb what they claim is runaway "climate change," it's no wonder that attempts to control the weather are part of this new warfare technology.

Bertell researched and spoke openly against this development, stating in her book that "US military scientists... are working on weather systems as a potential weapon."

Despite denials and cries of "conspiracy theory," there is a vast literature on weather modification techniques for military use, much of which is classified. The US and Russia are on record that they possess advanced Environmental Modification (ENMOD) technologies.

Asked, "Could weather weapons be responsible for climate change?" Werlhof responded:

"The US Air Force issued a report in 1996 entitled 'Weather as a Force Multiplier: Owning the Weather in 2025'. It states: 'Weather modification will become a part of domestic and international security and could be done unilaterally... It could have offensive and defensive applications and even be used for deterrence purposes. The ability to generate precipitation, fog, and storms on earth or to modify space weather... and the production of artificial weather all are a part of an integrated set of technologies which can provide substantial increase in US, or degraded capability in an adversary, to achieve global awareness, reach, and power.' 2025 – that's two years away. These are not secrets; they are openly available on the internet."⁵

▲ Prof. Michel Chossudovsky

Clues about this secret technology can be found elsewhere. In the 1970s, former US National Security advisor Zbigniew Brzezinski had foreseen in his book, Between Two Ages, that "Technology will make available, to the leaders of major nations, techniques for conducting secret warfare, of which only a bare minimum of security forces need be appraised."

According to an article by Prof. Michel Chossudovsky for Global Research, former French military officer Marc Filterman outlines several types of "unconventional weapons" using radio frequencies. He refers to "weather war," indicating that the US and the Soviet Union had already "mastered the know-how needed to unleash sudden climate changes (hurricanes, drought) in the early 1980s.⁶

▲ According to Prof. Chossudovsky, in recent years Turkiye President Recep Tayyip Erdogan (left) has cosied up to Russian President Vladimir Putin (right) and this relationship is seen by Washington as endangering its own geopolitical strategy. Western elites want Erdogan out, and this was reflected on the front cover of The Economist, released just before Turkiye's presidential election in May – the front page slogan reads: "Erdogan Must Go."

(Prof. Michel Chossudovsky's article 'Weather Warfare', first published by The Ecologist in 2008, provides a summary of several in-depth and detailed articles on ENMOD techniques for military use: theecologist.org/2008/may/22/weather-warfare.)

Triggered earthquakes, tsunamis, floods, cyclones, hurricanes, volcanic eruptions and runaway global climate change no longer sound like the fodder of conspiracy theorists or science fiction novelists. It's real, and it's been real for decades, and we can only imagine how much more sophisticated the weaponry is today.

Werlhof sounds a warning that geoengineering is destroying the earth and impacting humanity.

"CO₂ is not to blame for so-called climate change, but geoengineering. We are in a state of a world war. Ukraine is just a part of it. The weather manipulations are part of a world war against the earth as a planet, in order to gain control over the earth as a macro living being."

Her analysis points us to the possibility that a broader and long-term agenda is playing out right before our eyes. This "conspiracy theory" is outlined in a 2008 article by Ethan

Jacobs J.D. titled "The Geoengineering End Game":

"Years of research have revealed that the purpose of ongoing international geoengineering operations is to control the weather to create droughts and artificial scarcity of water and food (planned 'problem')."

Will we also see the open use of secret military technologies in the emerging new world order?

From the resulting global crisis, chaos and fear (planned 'reaction') of people not having adequate water and food due to 'climate change', a totalitarian world government (planned 'solution') will be perpetrated under the veil of 'sustainable development' (see United Nations' Agenda 21 and the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development).⁷

PRESSURING TURKIYE?

The earthquake in Turkiye resulted in economic, social, and political fallout for the ruling Erdogan government. But could this disaster have been linked to attempts on the part of US-NATO to undermine Erdogan's re-election?

According to Prof. Michel Chossudovsky, an expert on geopolitics, "Turkiye abandoned NATO's Air Defense System in favour of Russia's 'State of the Art' S-400. That acquisition of Russian military technology was part of a concurrent military cooperation agreement as well as an alliance between Turkiye and Russia established in the immediate aftermath of the failed July 2016 US-sponsored coup d'état [against Erdogan], not to mention the unsuccessful assassination plot directed against President Recep Tayyip Erdogan."⁸

"Also of significance," notes Chossudovsky, "Turkiye was involved in the months prior to the earthquake in blocking (on behalf of Moscow?) both Sweden and Finland from joining NATO. In the immediate wake of the earthquakes, pressured by Washington to comply, Ankara approved in late March Finland's application to join NATO."

“Washington is fully aware that you cannot win a war against Russia when the second largest military power member state of the North Atlantic Treaty Organisation, namely Turkiye, is ‘sleeping with the enemy’.”

According to his analysis, the objective is to “replace Erdogan with an obedient US proxy” and to eventually “dismantle the Russia-Turkiye alliance while reintegrating Turkiye back into the Atlantic Alliance as an ‘obedient NATO country’.”

This mirrors claims that the US orchestrated the conflict between Russia and Ukraine by staging the 2014 Kiev Maidan coup that overthrew a pro-Russian president, then militarised Ukraine with the objective of bringing it into the Western fold and putting NATO forces on a direct border with Russia. But would they trigger a massive, deadly quake to force Turkiye into line? It’s scary to think to what extent they will go in order to get Russia to do likewise and surrender to NATO pressure and back out of Ukraine.

PART OF THE AGENDA?

The use of Environmental Modification techniques was banned in the 1977 UN International Convention and ratified by the UN General Assembly. That ban included “military or other hostile use of environmental modification techniques having widespread, long-lasting or severe effects.” As of 2022, 78 countries have ratified/signed the treaty, including the US, Turkiye, Iran, Syria, Russia, and Iraq. Israel has not ratified the treaty.

But treaties are inevitably amended, changed, edited, and broken.

MARIE D. JONES is the author of over 25 non-fiction books, including Disinformation and You: Identify Propaganda and Manipulation and Toxin Nation. She is a regular contributor to New Dawn magazine and has appeared on television’s History Channel and on over 2,500 radio shows all over the world. She can be reached at her website, www.mariedjones.com.

UN Documents Gathering a body of global agreements

Home | Sustainable Development | Education | Water | Culture of Peace | Human Rights | Keywords | Search

Adopted by Resolution 31/72 of the United Nations General Assembly on 10 December 1976.

The Convention was opened for signature at Geneva on 18 May 1977.

Convention on the Prohibition of Military or Any Other Hostile Use of Environmental Modification Techniques

One has to wonder why it is still so difficult for the average person to acknowledge the possibility of such things as weather warfare and natural disaster terrorism used as a means to an end.

According to Encyclopedia Britannica, “geoengineering” is “the large-scale manipulation of a specific process central to controlling Earth’s climate for the purpose of obtaining a specific benefit.” Wikipedia says, “Climate engineering (also called geoengineering) is a term used for both carbon dioxide removal and solar radiation management, also called solar geoengineering, when applied at a planetary scale.”

In the coming years, the average person will hear a whole lot more about how geoengineering is going to help “save the planet” when billionaire elites begin their crazy schemes to “cool the planet” using climate manipulation technologies.

Will we also see the open use of secret military technologies in the emerging new world order?

What if you could render massive numbers of people dead or homeless as a cruel but effective way to get nations to bow to the dictates of global elites? Desperate times call for desperate measures, so doesn’t it behove the power elite to create more of those desperate times? Plagues, pandemics, earthquakes, mega-storms, volcanic eruptions, biblical-level floods; what will they not orchestrate, if given the chance, and the proper technology, to pull it off?

As the earth shakes and shudders and storm clouds brew and explode in fury, taking out entire towns and villages, and sending millions into poverty and despair, it appears anything goes when it comes to the “whatever it takes” goals of the global elite and their thirst for control over nature and the future direction of humanity.

FOOTNOTES

1. livescience.com/8071-chavez-tectonic-weapon-caused-haiti-quake.html
2. newdawnmagazine.com/articles/earthquakes-natural-or-man-made
3. eurasianimes.com/were-haiti-lebanon-now-turkey-subjected-to-a-man-made-earthquake-via-haarp-technology
4. globalresearch.ca/was-earthquake-turkey-syria-man-made/5810999
5. apps.dtic.mil/dtic/tr/fulltext/u2/a333462.pdf
6. globalresearch.ca/environmental-modification-techniques-enmod-and-the-turkey-syria-earthquake-an-expert-investigation-is-required/5808207
7. activistpost.com/2018/02/geoengineering-end-game.html
8. Op cit. 6